price. They look like it.A HERO IS NOW AT RESTEngineer Thomas D. Hall is Borne to the Tomb.

A GREAT MANY THERE

Casket Concealed by Beautiful Flowers, Orders to Which He Belonged Well Represented—The Burial of Fireman Snyder.The funeral services of the lamented Engineer Thomas D. Hall, one of the victims of the railway wreck near Charlottesville, took place at 11 A. M. today at the First Baptist Church, and was attended by one of the largest congregations ever seen at a funeral there in years. It was a long and sorrowful procession that followed the body of the brave engineer from the residence to the church and thence to the burial wood, where it was consigned to the earth. Among those attending the funeral were a large number of engineers, members of Divisions 21 of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and many other trainmen and railway officials and employees, the Masonic fraternity and a large outpouring of friends and neighbors. Seldom has a more beautiful array of floral tributes been seen at a funeral than on this occasion. Among them were some beautiful designs, sent by his fellow employees of the railway company and others. Roses, carnations, sweet peas and other blossoms in great profusion covered the casket, and concealed the new-made grave when they had been spread upon it.The services were conducted by Rev.
George Cooper, D. D., pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. W. R. L. Smith, D. D., of the First Baptist Church.
The service was concluded at the grave, and included also the burial ritual of the Masonic fraternity. The music was one of the touching features of the funeral.
The pall-bearers were: Mr. J. W. Smith, clerk, trainmen; Brotherhood; Masonic fraternity and friends were: Hoparney-Messers, A. H. Hill, J. N. Unshu, E. W. Face, R. Nelson, W. G.

nah, Ga.to believe that such a crowd needed a brush-ing before the searching eyes of his wife fell upon it. He was entirely innocent, just as many other unlucky men have been, but when a woman sees a thing she sees it, and the only thing to do is to seek shelter and wait until the storm passes over. However, for the purpose of the comedy, Oliver West put himself in the way of the storm by following it to the house of his mother-in-law. In itself a most foolhardy thing to do. However, it is just as well, perhaps, not to dwell upon the piece. Those who have seen it will remember it very well, and it is not easy to forget while those who have not, will enjoy it all the more thoroughly if they are not made familiar with it beforehand.The piece was very well produced, and was splendidly staged. Miss Percy Haswell, as the jealous wife, was most convincing, while Mr. Frank Gilmore was all that could be desired as Oliver West.
The John Weatherly of Mr. Alfred Hudson had in it an element of comedy which proved vastly pleasing to the audience.
All of the roles were acceptably filled, with the result that a good performance was given.The largest audience of the summer season witnessed the performance of "Friends" at the Academy last night.
The verdict both as to the play and the players has been most emphatically favorable, and genuine pleasure has been expressed that a company of such calibre is to figure so greatly in the summer theatricals. There is not really a weak spot in the cast, and the performance is simply idyllic.The Giffen Company will be seen next week in "Under the Red Robe," a play that has been much discussed, but never seen here. It is a very ambitious undertaking, and no effort is being spared to make it one of the biggest features of any summer stock season in this city.Another Fawcett Company will be at the Bijou next week in a fine revival of "The Little Minister." Manager Fawcett will introduce a new star in this part.
The play is so well known here that it needs no recommendation. Its popularity has already been attached by a phenomenal advance sale.Mrs. Kells, of New York, is visiting her
